Pandemic-Related OSHA Complaints: Return to Workplaces Only Escalates the Risks

May 28, 2020

By: Robert S. Nichols and Caroline Melo

Employees coping with health-related anxieties as workplaces reopen are commonly turning to OSHA for help. Resulting legal risks for employers can take several forms.

This webinar will succinctly explain those OSHA-related legal concerns and how to avoid potential claims and liability. Specific issues to be addressed include:

- Strategies for Avoiding OSHA Citations for Unsafe Working Conditions Related to the Pandemic
- Understanding and Lawfully Responding to Employee Refusals to Work Over Safety or Health Worries
- Avoiding 11(c) OSH Act Retaliation Claims When an Employee Raises a Health or Safety Concern
